STIs

think keeping him on lock is all you have to do?

While, knowing the health status of your partner can be one method of reducing the likelihood of acquiring HIV/AIDS or sexually transmitted infections (STIs), it is far from a fool-proof plan. Being in a relationship means different things to different people, and you can never be 100% certain of the sexual choices your partner makes outside of your relationship. Have open and honest conversations with your partner about the expectations of your relationship, and what to do if one of you slips up. Go together to get tested for HIV and STIs regularly to reduce your risk.
